

THE RISE INTO NOTICE OF CANADA

Two years ago Great Britain was absorbed in domestic affairs and foreign finances that she had small inclination to discuss Canada. In colonial matters Australia and Africa absorbed most attention and of North American affairs the United States, by common consent, obtained the most persistent notice. At this time, on the contrary, Australian matters are considered only in for discussion among the unfortunate shareholders of the disorganized bank and companies of the Antipodes, in Africa the draft of events is known as immediate colonization, but rather the consolidation of the various countries of the south, in order to attract to the latter the trade of the north, the Argentine Republic is no longer considered a proper field for European emigration, and in the efforts to extend beyond the extraordinary attention devoted to such matters as the succession to the throne of Spain, a large of rather unimportant nature. Meanwhile, however, the activity of the Union in Latin American, together with the efforts of the railway companies, has been steadily working up a feeling in favor of emigration to Canada's resources, which would require some part of a national development of her interests to build out and attract attention to all Canadian subjects. Combined with many of the great newspapers which have for years past been staffing the Dominion of Canada with reports of the Empire-Belt, and an unparalleled system of ways from the interior of the continent of America to the ocean—once at length, price value that any market is concerned by, with the greater and most productive division of the continent, must necessarily load and not follow. Perhaps, however, the main factor is the rise of China in price is the Imperial sentiment of the English people. By the construction of the Canton-Peking railway it cannot be denied that the appetite of the English for Imperialism has been amply catered to. Ever since the period of the Opium wars the people have felt the weight of Russian intrigue towards India, and realized the

the passage of the Suez canal for armaments and military transports, even if the short-cut route to the defence of the Indian Ocean peninsula, is by no means assured. Recent events, such as the extension of the Russian railway to Peshawar, a short distance from Poonch, and the increasing hostile attitude of of France, have if anything, increased desire of the people for some alternative route to the East. Thus stimulated, the leaders of the people have diligent searched the map, and hit upon Canada as providing his alternative route. The construction of the Canadian Pac forced, as it were, the last link in the Canadian route to the East. Therefore, appealing to the Imperial sentiments of the English people this railway has revealed the entire panorama of the Dominion, and the important relations Canada to the Empire have burst upon the nation with something of the interesting effect which the pictures of Western opportunities in the United States produced years ago. This enthusiasm of English will not die out until Canada is populated and developed. Such an opportunity as this for Canadian effort

Among British homes and investors it is good to be lost. There are many indications that all descriptions of information respecting Canada, her resources, opportunities and advantages, will be abundantly received at this time and it is fervently hoped that the railway governments and people will redoubt their efforts in Europe without delay.
